

INDEX

Preface , by Gastone Cottino »	15
---	----

Introduction , by Eva R. Desana & Mia Callegari »	23
1. Data on gender inequality in the world »	23
2. Institutional interventions »	24
3. The parameter of economic participation »	26
4. EU Interventions to correct economic underrepresentation: overview »	27
5. The corrective interventions of the individual legal systems: an outline »	28

Foreword. A snowball's increase in the number of women on boards: Spumante, kawa, sekt and champagne , by Morten Huse »	31
--	----

Part I: Political, economic and sociological perspectives

Italy's slow path toward gender rebalancing in political representation , by Elena Bindi »	37
1. Introduction. The path to the recognition of women's right to vote in Italy: the elections of June 2, 1946 »	37
2. The provision in the Italian Constitution of substantive equality and the state's commitment to remove starting barriers. »	43
3. The legislature's first attempt to remove obstacles and the primacy of formal equality enshrined by the Constitutional Court (Sentence No. 422 of 1995) »	45
4. The "inevitable" constitutional reforms (of Articles 51 and 117(7) Const.) »	49
5. The Court's "courage" and the government's "inconsistency" (Judgment No. 49 of 2003) . . »	52
6. Gender preference in regional legislation: the government's persistent stubborn closure and the Court's clear opening (Judgment No. 4 of 2010) »	54
7. Steps forward by the state legislature (Laws No. 215 of 2012 and No. 56 of 2014 on regional, provincial, municipal and metropolitan city electoral legislation) and the fluctuations of administrative jurisprudence »	57
8. The 2016 constitutional reform project and the promotion of a balance between women and men in representation (Articles 55(2) and 122(1) of the Constitution) »	62
9. Gender rebalancing mechanisms in the electoral system of the Chamber of Deputies (from Law No. 52 of 2015, the so-called Italicum, to Law No. 165 of 2017, the so-called Rosatellum). »	64
10. The promotion of equal opportunities between women and men in access to regional elective office (Law No. 20 of 2016) and measures to support equal access to elected office in regional electoral legislation »	69

11. A new intervention of the Constitutional Court on gender equality (Judgment No. 62/2022) »	77
12. Some brief closing remarks »	82

Women on corporate boards: Leveraging female talent for corporate performance , by Sara De Masi »	87
1. Beyond profits: How women on boards shape corporate results. »	87
2. Critical mass in the board of directors. »	91
3. Characteristics of female leadership. »	93

Women's careers inside and outside corporate organisations: sociological profiles , by Giulia M. Cavaletto, Joselle Dagnes, Manuela Olagnero »	99
1. The Golfo-Mosca Law: point of arrival and starting point for gender equality »	99
2. The constraints at the start of women's careers »	103
3. Getting to the top: resources, paths and outcomes »	105
4. Framework: actors involved, definitions, expected and unexpected consequences »	109
5. Professional careers and biographical balances »	112
6. Conclusions »	116

Gender diversity in the boardroom and sustainability performance: empirical evidence and research insights , by Francesca Bichiri, Dario Peirone. »	119
1. Aligning goals: sustainability and boardroom gender equality. »	119
2. The promise of gender diversity and its theoretical foundations. »	122
3. Empirical insights from the literature: the impact of gender diversity in boardrooms on ESG performance »	124
4. Final considerations and research opportunities. »	128

Part II: A comparative legal perspective: the approach of different legal systems and future scenarios

Section I - Between soft law and hard law: solutions to tackle gender discrimination around the world

A global leader in gender equality: the quota law in Norway , by Lavinia Palombo. . . »	133
1. Introduction: is Norway yet again a pioneer in gender equality? »	133
2. Historical background and political rationales of the Norwegian quota law for public limited companies »	134
3. The statutory quota regime under the Public Limited Liability Companies Act (ASA). . . »	137
4. Impact and limitations of the law: is the “golden skirts” phenomenon still an issue? . . . »	139
5. The proposal on gender quotas for private limited companies »	143
6. A comparison between the ASA and the European Directive on gender balance on the boards of directors of public listed companies: has the Directive already been surpassed? . . »	146

7. Conclusions »	149
The french model: a gradualistic approach to gender equality , by Marco Arena . . »	151
1. The Loi Copé-Zimmermann : a milestone on the path to reform. »	151
2. Toward the realization of an “internal ladder” to facilitate access to top positions: the Loi PACTE and Loi Rixain »	155
3. Concluding reflections and future prospects »	164
Corporate bodies and gender equality in Spain: new answers (and a long-standing silence) , by Riccardo Russo »	167
1. Introduction »	167
2. The principle of equality between the Constitution, Ley Orgánica No. 3 of 2007 and Código de buen gobierno de las sociedades cotizadas »	169
3. Gender balance and executive functions in Spanish boards »	172
4. Does Spanish legislation provide for gender equality in the Boards of Directors with attenuated protection?. »	174
5. Some empirical observations »	175
6. Conclusions »	176
Gender equality in Germany: protection on the rise , by Rossella Rivaró »	179
1. A bumpy road to gender equality »	179
2. The regulatory introduction of gender quotas: scope and limits of the 2015 regulations. . . »	181
3. The historic turning point of FüPoG II in 2021 »	185
Sweden: when gender balance is pursued without (but with) quotas , by Francesca Bichiri »	187
1. Gender balance in Swedish decision-making bodies in politics and business »	187
2. Gender quotas as a threat to the Swedish corporate governance model: the real driver of efforts to achieve gender balance. »	189
3. Comparative notes. Sweden and Italy: when the quota instrument brings together two countries at opposite ends of the gender ladder »	195
Concluding remarks »	197
The case of the UK: soft law, “hard” outcomes? , by Davide Vitale »	199
1. Introduction »	199
2. The background. The Higgs Review and early debates »	200
3. Signs of improvement. The 2011 “Women on Boards Review” and its impact »	204
4. The role of executive search firms »	210
5. The current situation »	212
6. Soft law, hard outcomes: Perspectives and conclusions »	213

Gender (im)balance in the boardrooms of listed companies in Poland , by Weronika Herbet-Homenda »	217
1. Undergoing transition and evolution of the Polish approach towards the empowerment of women in company board »	217
2. Upcoming changes in the current legal state-of-play »	220
3. Discussion »	221
4. Conclusions »	223
 The United States: disclosure obligations or gender quotas? , by Francesco Masetto. . . »	225
1. Foreword »	225
2. The first federal intervention: amendments to SEC Regulation S-K »	226
3. The Dodd-Frank Act: the establishment of OMWIs and the Interagency Policy Statement . . »	227
4. The new Nasdaq listing rules »	230
4.1. Initial reactions to the new Nasdaq listing rules. »	231
5. Gender quotas in state legislation: the case of California »	234
5.1. The constitutionality issues about the Californian Law: decisions by federal courts . . »	237
5.2. The constitutionality of California's quota laws: decisions by state courts »	240
5.3. The effectiveness of the Women on Boards Act »	242
6. Gender diversity on boards at the federal level. »	243
7. Concluding remarks »	244
 The debate on gender equality in governing bodies in Latin American legal systems. The case of Panama , by Fabrizio Sudiero. »	247
1. The debate in Latin American orders »	247
2. The Panama case: Ley No. 56 of 2017 and its regulations. »	249
2.1. Scope of application »	249
2.2. Las “mujeres” o el “genero menos representado”? »	251
2.3. “Participation” or “access”? »	253
2.4. Discipline »	254
3. Conclusions »	257
 The presence of women in leadership positions in Brazil , by Rafael Belitzck Ferreira . . »	259
1. Discussions on gender equality in Brazil. »	259
2. Quantitative data on the presence of women in leadership positions »	264
3. Good business practices in contemporary times: non-legal solutions »	273
4. Final Considerations »	275

Section II - The curious case of Italy

Gender diversity and ESG in Italy , by Eva R. Desana »	279
1. Women and economic power in Italy: the under-representation of women and the quota remedy »	279
2. The Golfo-Mosca Law and its extension »	280
3. The Corporate Governance Report and the provisions of the Corporate Governance Code: between hard and soft law »	282
4. The gender balance debate: outline »	285
5. The snowball effect on banks and insurance companies »	288
6. Women and attention to ESG factors »	290
7. Future Scenarios »	296

Italian listed companies: Copernican gender diversity revolution, supervision and the related empirical data , by Maria Elodie Musumeci »	301
1. Introduction »	301
2. Italian legislation on gender balance in the composition of corporate bodies »	302
2.1. Applicable law »	302
2.2. Secondary and self-regulatory interventions »	305
2.3. The evidence of scarcity of woman in leadership roles »	306
3. The application of gender quotas: roses and thorns »	307
3.1. The content of the statutory clauses in the articles of association »	309
3.2. The additional requirements introduced by CONSOB »	311
4. CONSOB's powers and the sanctioning procedure »	312
4.1. Regulatory delegation content and CONSOB's reference to articles 195 TUF »	312
4.2. The three-tier sanctioning regime »	313
4.3. The second deadline for compliance and the dissolution of the corporate body »	315

Gender balance in Italian state-owned companies: a model for the other countries? , by Toti S. Musumeci »	317
1. Introduction »	317
2. The Consolidated Law on Public Participated Companies »	319
3. The Gribaudo Law and publicly controlled companies »	321
4. The results achieved: upsides and downsides »	322

The report and the certification on gender equality: innovative measures to tackle gender discrimination , by Giulia Proietti »	325
1. Introduction »	325
2. The report on the personnel situation »	326
3. The certification of gender equality »	329
4. Conclusions »	334

Section III - The European evolution: Women on Boards Directive and future perspectives

The “Women on Boards” Directive in the European and international legal landscape and the prospects for reducing the gender gap through harmonization of legislation, by Mia Callegari »	339
1. The Directive’s approval process within the European legal framework »	339
2. Affirmative action as a corrective to the principle of formal equality »	342
3. Data regarding the gender gap and the urgency of introducing gender quotas »	343
4. The aim of the Directive »	345
5. The objectives regarding gender balance in corporate governance »	347
6. Instruments indicated by the Directive in order to achieve the objectives »	351
7. The relevance of the provision of an adequate sanctioning system. »	358
 New perspectives and final remarks, by Mia Callegari & Eva R. Desana »	 361